SUBJECT: The Security Investigation Office of the West German Federal Criminal Police (SG of the BKA)

The following information on the Security Investigation Office of the West German Federal Criminal Police may be of interest to persons who will be dealing with Dr. Ernst BRUECKNER during his visit to the United States in June 1956 and who may need information on this office of which he is chief.

The Security Investigation Office of the Federal Criminal Police was created in August 1951, initially as a guard force for senior federal officials and key installations. However, the absence of any federal police group competent to make arrests, searches, and seizures in cases of treason and high treason led the Ministry of Interior to give this task to the Security Investigation Office.

Made up of well-trained criminal police, the Security Office is composed as follows:

1. Central Section: This section runs the internal business of the Security Group, its personnel matters, files, housekeeping, laboratory, business matters, motor pool, and radio station.

2. Protection and Security Section: This section performs the actual bodyguard, building guard, and escort work. Some travel abroad. Regular staffs are assigned to the Federal President and the Federal Chancellor.

3. Investigation Section: This section investigates cases of treason and high treason. Sections under treason cover activities of the MFS (East German Ministry of State Security), the RIS (Soviet Intelligence Organization), and the Satellite Intelligence services. Sections under high treason deal with the Communist Party, Communist Front organizations, Rightist Groups, Sabotage, Subversive publications, and investigations of SG and high government personnel.
